This boat was recognized from her deck and window and hull configuration as an Itchen Ferry aft cockpit long keeled cruiser (or very similar believed to have been built sometime in the 1970's. She is currently out of commission as a sailing vessel with no evidence of sails, rigging and mast unstepped. She has a Yanmar inboard diesel engine. It is unknown if the engine runs. The internal fit out is in poor condition and vessel is believed to have been home completed originally. There are various areas of minor damage to her hull and deck moulding. This should be considered a project.
